DIAMONDS

The keenest diamond buyers are among the people to whom our line invariably appeals most strongly. First, because of the large and carefully selected stock that we carry at all times; and secondly, because our prices and very liberal treatment are elements that do not enter into the dealings of every firm. Another iness and promptness in our Manufacturing and Repairing Department.

Some Attention Paid to Mayor Taggart's Latest Message-Campaign Opening-Other Speeches.

The Republicans formally opened the city ampaign at a large and enthusiastic meeting given under the auspices of the East End Republican Club last night. Nearly all of the candidates were present, and a number of them made speeches out!ining the party policy. The meeting was held in e open air on a number of vacant lots just opposite the clubhouse of the East End Republican Club, on East Michigan street. The grounds where the meeting was held, the clubhouse and the street between the two places were beautifully decorated with Chinese lanterns. In making this last request, my fellow-citizens, this administration has been compelled to strip away the last shred of the mask which they have held over their record; and they stand to-day before the people of Indianapolis convicted of almost criminal mismanagement of city affairs; and with brazen effrontery asking a Republican Council to authorize them to make a loan which will carry the debt of the city beyond the constitutional 2 per cent

THE TAGGART MESSAGE.

"With this condition prevailing-with this situation of the city treasury-knowing that the constitutional debt limit has been reached by accrued bills, and if all city obligations are paid will be exceeded; at this time, as he did two years ago, when, with a deficit in the city treasury of nearly $50,000, Mr. Taggart assured the people of indianapolis that he was able to reduce the evy owing to the economies he had praciced, and owing to the careful business management of affairs which had characterized his administration during the previous four years-Mr. Taggart again comes before the people of Indianapolis in an an-nual message, submitted Monday night to the City Council, in which he declares that city affairs for the enusing two years can be conducted without an increase of the tax levy. I ask you, my fellow-citizens, are you longer in favor of a continuation of this pewhich each year the load upon the backs of the taxpayers is increased by the amount of interest which must be paid upon these temporary loans which are rendered necessary by the efforts of the present administration to conceal from you the actual condition of your affairs. If so, I ask you to soberly stop and think and inquire of yourself what will be the ultimate end of the finance continue to prevail. There will come a day when these obligations must be paid, and when that time comes there will be taxpayers a burdensome load which will drive from Indianapolis capital seeking investment, manufacturers seeking locations and labor seeking employment. We are all interested in this question, capitalists, manufacturers and laborers alike. Henry Mills, a well-known character in he northeastern part of the city, was shot at Nineteenth street and Columbia avenue, last night, by Henry Miller, a negro living at 1729 Columbia avenue. He was until a late hour in a critical condition, and Dr. H. S. Leonard, who attended him, said there was little chance for his recovery. The negro escaped from the scene of the shooting and the police did not find him until several hours later.

Before Grover could reach Mills the negro had fired two more shots, one of which took effect while Mills was on his knees, Grover started toward Mills, and to hin and boys from the large crowd, which had running up and Miller ran across the street. Two shots were fired from across the street. but it was not known whether they were fired by Miller or some one else. John S. Nolan, who runs the merry-go-round, ran from his machine and fired two shots at Miller as he was running across the street. He dropped to the ground, and it was re ported that he had been shot. The attention of most persons was directed to Mills, and when search was made for Miller he could not be found. One of the bullets which struck Mills in flicted what is thought to be a fatal wound. It struck him just above the heart, and its course could not be traced. He told his had been in business here for twenty-five friends he was fatally injured, and asked to be left there on the walk until the ambulance arrived. Later a mattress was secured at the home of J. F. Morse, and upon it he was carried to the Morse home. Some of the boys in the crowd said Miller had been seen after the shooting about his home, from which he came just prior to it. No one seemed to know his home address. and the police were delayed. It was not until Detectives Splan and Haley visited the house at 1729 Columbia avenue that the identity of the negro who did the shooting was really learned. He had returned to the house and told his mother what had happened. After much persuasion she accompanied the detectives to the place on Baltimore avenue where he had told her he was going. They found him there, and he was sent to headquarters, charged with shooting with intent to kill. He said he had been attacked by some of the whites and that he saw them reach into their pockets as if to draw revolvers, and he did the same. Later Detectives Gerber and Lancaster went to his home and secured the revolver he had used. Only two of the cartridges had been discharged. Most of the witnesses agreed that three shots had been fired by him. Later it was learned that a negro named Wallace Pickett, living on East St. Clair street, had been shot in the head by one of the bullets, which it old and has a membership of eight hundred | was thought had not taken effect. Smoke and water did the worst of the damage. The fire itself scarcely scorched a single camera or a sundry item of our choosing. So, while the boxes and wrappers are disfigured, the stock is practically unharmed. Both the professional and the amateur will find it an event alike interesting and profitable. The selections we made include the leading Cameras, Darkroom Lamps, Tripods, Photographic Printing Frames, Feber Trays, etc.
